BRAC'S AIM 2.0 PROGRAM ENGAGES KAMWENGE LEADERS TO DRIVE CHANGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN

By Joy Kiiza, Senior IT Officer- Kamwenge

BRAC Uganda, in collaboration with the Mastercard Foundation (MCF), hosted a key sensitization and engagement meeting for district stakeholders in Kamwenge, focusing on the implementation of the five-year, Accelerating Impact for Young Women in Africa (AIM 2.0) program.

The event, held at Igogora Country Resort, aimed to deepen understanding of the program's cost-sharing model and foster stronger collaboration with local governments to ensure its successful roll-out.

The AIM 2.0 program is designed to empower 1.2 million adolescent girls and young women (AGYW) across Africa, with a goal of lifting them out of poverty by 2030. The initiative adopts a comprehensive approach, addressing social and economic empowerment alongside creating an enabling environment that fosters long-term community impact. By equipping young women with the skills and resources they need to succeed, AIM 2.0 aims to create a more equitable and prosperous future for the next generation of African women.

The meeting brought together key stakeholders from Kamwenge District, including the District Police Commander, Chief Administrative Officer, Town Clerks, Veterinary Officer, Community Development Officers, and Subcounty Chiefs from areas set to benefit from the program. These leaders were briefed on the program's key components, with a focus on the cost-sharing model, which emphasizes joint responsibility between BRAC, local governments, and the community for the program's success and sustainability.

The cost-sharing approach encourages active participation by local governments and communities, ensuring that they not only support but also take ownership of the program's outcomes. By aligning local resources with those of BRAC and MCF, the AIM 2.0 initiative aims to build a lasting foundation for young women's economic independence in the district.

Mrs Namara Loy Batuuze, the Deputy Resident District Commissioner (RDC), was a key speaker at the event. She expressed strong support for the program, commending BRAC's ongoing efforts to uplift the lives of young women in Kamwenge. "We are grateful to BRAC for their commitment to empowering our young women and for contributing significantly to poverty reduction in the district," Mrs Batuuze said.

She pledged to continue offering support for this important initiative, including providing airtime on local radio stations to help sensitize communities about the program.

Her remarks reflected the strong commitment from the district administration to ensure the program's success. Stakeholders from the meeting also shared their enthusiasm for the initiative, emphasizing the critical role of local ownership in ensuring the sustainability of AIM 2.0's impact.

A Holistic Approach to Empowerment

The AIM 2.0 program takes an integrated approach to empowerment, focusing on three key pillars: social empowerment, economic empowerment, and creating an enabling environment. This holistic model is designed to address the interconnected challenges faced by young women in Kamwenge, including limited access to education, vocational training, and financial independence.

In addition to providing essential skills training, the program will offer mentorship opportunities, access to microfinance, and a supportive community environment to help young women overcome barriers to success. The goal is not only to help them build livelihoods but to equip them with the tools to become resilient leaders in their communities.

The meeting concluded with a shared commitment from BRAC, the Mastercard Foundation, and district stakeholders to strengthen coordination and ensure that the program's objectives are met. Over the coming months, the implementation phase will begin, with local governments and community leaders taking active roles in supporting the program's rollout.

With the support of local government and a solid cost-sharing framework, AIM 2.0 is poised to make a lasting impact on Kamwenge District, helping young women break free from the cycle of poverty and achieve long-term success.

About the AIM 2.0 Program

The Accelerating Impact for Young Women in Africa (AIM 2.0) program is a five-year initiative implemented by BRAC Uganda in partnership with the Mastercard Foundation. The program seeks to equip adolescent girls and young women with the necessary tools, skills, and resources to become economically independent, resilient, and active contributors to their communities. Through education, vocational training, and entrepreneurship support, AIM 2.0 aims to transform the lives of young women across Africa and achieve measurable impact by 2030.

the top ten local governments in the country this year. "We want to assure everyone that we are fully prepared for this assessment, and we believe our performance will greatly improve compared to previous years," Mr Akampurira said.

The annual OPM assessment aims to enhance public service delivery by holding local governments accountable, promoting efficient use of resources, and rewarding good performance through performance-based grants. It also helps identify gaps in administration and service delivery for targeted improvement.

The leader of the assessment team, Mr Moses Kanyarutookye, explained that the exercise is designed to evaluate compliance with government laws, standards, and procedures. He noted that all assessors had undergone rigorous training to ensure a professional and transparent process.

"The entry meeting is meant to introduce the team, explain the objectives, processes, and requirements of the assessment. We will evaluate both the district headquarters and field institutions such as health centres, primary schools, sub-counties, and town councils to verify reported results," Mr Kanyarutookye said.

He also read a letter from the Permanent Secretary in the Office of the Prime Minister, Mr Alex Kakooza, urging heads of departments to cooperate with the assessors to ensure a smooth exercise.

In his remarks, the District Vice Chairperson, Mr Alex Twinomuhwezi, welcomed the assessment team, commending the district's steady improvement in recent years. # KABAROLE'S NEW WATER INITIATIVE BRINGS HOPE IN THE FIGHT AGAINST BILHARZIA

By Stephen Ainganiza, Communication Officer-Kabarole

The commissioned water project in Kasenda.

Kabarole District is making significant strides in improving public health and access to clean water, thanks to the launch of a 1.2 billion-shilling water project aimed at reducing the prevalence of Bilharzia in local communities.

In partnership with the Ministry of Water and Environment, this initiative, which includes the establishment of two piped water extension sites in Kasenda Sub-County, brings renewed hope to a community that has long struggled with waterborne diseases like Bilharzia.

The project, executed by Nexus Green Limited, features water supply sites that will serve multiple villages. According to Jonathan Kutosi, the lead supervisor at Nexus Green, the Iruhura water supply site will benefit the villages of Rweraza A and B, while the Kinombe water supply site will cater to seven additional villages, including Rwenjuba, Nyabweya, Kibuga, Mwezi, and Kinombe. This expansion is crucial, as many residents have relied on unsafe water sources, leading to health complications.

Eng Nsabimana Robert, Assistant Manager at Mid-Western Umbrella, emphasized the importance of accessibility. "The water extension was primarily installed along roadsides, with public tap stands constructed for community use," Eng Nsabimana explained.

Residents living within a 0-50-meter radius of these taps can apply for a home water extension at a cost of 220,000 shillings through the Kasenda Sub-

County office. “To ensure the sustainability of this initiative, a comprehensive water extension sustainability plan has been developed, which includes conducting needs assessments to facilitate further water access in deeper village areas,” he added.

Mr Sam Tinkasimire Tusiime from the Ministry of Water highlighted the historical challenges faced by Kasenda in terms of water supply. “The commissioning of this project is a vital step towards alleviating the burden of Bilharzia disease that the people of this sub-county have been facing. I urge residents of Kasenda to engage in environmental protection and conservation efforts to maintain the water supply,” he remarked.

Mr Muhumuza Joseph, the Secretary for Health, representing the District Chairperson, encouraged residents to adopt safe water practices. “I advise you to use clean jerricans for fetching water and to boil water before consumption to prevent waterborne diseases, thereby fulfilling the objectives of the water extension project,” Muhumuza said.

Community leaders, including area Councilor Ruta Gideon and Assistant Chief Administrative Officer Mugarra

Marvin, urged residents to take ownership of the water sources and warned against vandalism, emphasizing the importance of sustaining the project. “We have noticed many times that projects are extended in the area, but to our dismay, the people who have been crying foul over lack of water are the ones who vandalize the facilities. It’s a bad habit that affects development, and we stand warned,” they stated.

Residents like Kemigisha Joyce and Nkusiima Johnson expressed their gratitude for the project, sharing their past struggles with water sourced from contaminated crater lakes, which had led to health issues. The commissioning of this water project addresses the long-standing concerns of female district councilor Madam Nasasira Annet, who has tirelessly advocated for clean water access in Kasenda.

This water project not only represents a significant investment in public health but also symbolizes a commitment to improving the quality of life for the people of Kabarole District.

KASESE LEADS WITH INCLUSIVE BUDGET APPROACH FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

By Kabugho Sharon, Communications Officer-Kasese

Leaders, technocrats, and community representatives from across Kasese District gathered at the Multipurpose Hall for the annual District Budget Conference, setting the stage for a transformative financial year 2026/2027. The meeting graced by District Chairperson Hon Muhindi Bukombi Eliphaz on October 30, 2025, was not merely a statutory event but a vision-setting moment that showed the district's commitment to turning planning into tangible impact.

Under the national theme, "Full Monetization of Uganda's Economy through Commercial Agriculture, Industrialization, Expanding and Broadening Services, Digital Transformation and Market Access," the Chairperson's remarks framed Kasese's budget priorities around economic empowerment, infrastructure resilience, and human development.

Hon Muhindi's address was a call to action urging all stakeholders to look beyond numbers and see the lives behind each allocation. The district's Shs 120.1 billion resource envelope, comprising locally raised revenue, central government grants, and donor funding, will directly target areas that touch everyday livelihoods. Among the top priorities are:

- Strengthening the Parish Development Model (PDM) to enhance household incomes and community-driven growth.
- Agro-industrialization and water for production aimed at shielding farmers from erratic weather patterns while boosting agricultural value chains.
- Education and health service quality, ensuring the next generation grows healthier, more skilled, and ready to compete.

- Road rehabilitation and maintenance, a key to unlocking market access and regional trade potential.

These priorities are not abstract, they promise to bring visible change to rural communities, schools, and health facilities across the district.

Kasese's development story is one of steady progress shadowed by recurring hurdles. The Chairperson candidly highlighted issues such as rapid population growth, land fragmentation, unpredictable weather patterns, and inadequate road funding factors that threaten to erode gains made over the past decade.

In response, the district is turning to innovative solutions:

Irrigation initiatives under the Local and Micro-Scale Irrigation programmes to combat drought and ensure all-season farming.

- Security strengthening to protect farmers and investors from theft and vandalism.
- Skilling programs like the Kasese Youth Polytechnic and Katwe Training Institute to empower young people with employable skills.
- A proposed tree planting ordinance to combat climate change and promote environmental stewardship.

These initiatives reflect a governance model that listens, adapts, and acts in response to emerging realities.

Beyond infrastructure and investment, the Chairperson's remarks placed a strong emphasis on human capital. He pointed to growing concerns over malnutrition and stunted growth, especially among children and women, and the rising cases of HIV/AIDS that threaten social progress.

By calling for increased household-level nutrition campaigns and anti-stigma health drives, the district leadership is reframing development not just as economic output, but as the well-being of its people.

Hon Muhindi's closing message was both inspirational and pragmatic: true transformation will come only when every citizen of Kasese takes ownership of the district's agenda. From local council leaders to farmers, teachers, and business people, everyone's input into the budgeting process was portrayed as vital to crafting an inclusive and people-centered development framework.

on rumours or political statements," he advised.

They also emphasized calls for media literacy education, ethical reporting, and digital safety awareness to help young people navigate the modern communication landscape responsibly.

Captain Denis Kakuru, the Head of mindset change at Tooro Industrial Hub, commended the initiative, noting that empowering youth with communication skills supports the government's efforts toward socio-economic transformation. "When our young people understand how to use media constructively, they become ambassadors of development and peace. We encourage them to use their voices to promote unity and productivity within their communities," he said.
